Breakout Group 4 (ch. 26): Alyssa Castillo, Colin Morris-Moncada, Natasha Barnes

Summary: In the beginning of the chapter it sort of talks about everyone getting ready to go their separate ways. At the Bistro Oliver stands at the door, Gabri had no words but to just fall into his arms. Oliver looks at the inspector and thanks him because he's free, Gamache apologizes to Oliver about any doubts that he had Gamache said he was wrong. Oliver can't forgive him and told Gamache that he had no idea what it was like, but in time he could probably forgive him. Then Gamache walks out and sees Morin and hugs him and asks for his forgiveness and there was only silence.

Discussion Questions:

1. Did Inspector Gamache deserve Olivier's forgiveness?
2. Although all characters seem to be moving forward with their lives will they still be tied together from the events happened in the future?
3. Will Gamache in future books ever forgive himself for the death of Paul Morin?
